

A day on self-organized and collective practices led by:

Doe Het Zelf Werkplaats

Non Native Native & Soupspoon Collective

KraakSpreekuur Rotterdam

Papaya Kuir

& additional presentations by Femke Dekker (Loma Doom), WdKA students and artists to be announced.

This event is all about spaces and communities that artists, activists, and other people create together.

It's the third in a series (the last ones were in 2017 and 2019), and this time we're focusing on how things have changed.

Since the pandemic, exploding housing costs, and multiple crises, it's become harder to run self-organized communities. But perhaps, they are more important now than ever before.

We'll ask questions like: How can we work together in difficult times? How can we make things fair? How to deal with power and privilege? What have been oversights and mistakes in the past?

The day will consist of workshops, where you can explore these issues with artists through collective activities. At the end, we'll put our ideas together in a map.

This event is organized by Roodkapje and the Autonomy Lab research group of the Willem de Kooning Academy, made possible by the kind support of Pictoright Fonds. All funding goes to the artists and the event.
